Kindly Share This Story: The President of the Senate, Dr. Bukola Saraki, has dissociated himself from the crude remarks of a Senator he said has no right to speak on any subject on Nigerian soil. Saraki took to his Facebook page on Thursday to issue the clarification after a Senator in his party, popularly known as the PDP, had reportedly accused Saraki of collaborating with the President of the House, Mr. Yakubu Dogara. The Senator, Ado Ekong, who is the Senate deputy Minority leader, is a member of the People's Democratic Party. Saraki said; "I am taking this opportunity to dissociate myself from the remarks and insinuations made by the Senator, one of my own brothers, on national television last night. I will not be drawn into this personal attack," he said. "What I must say is that if there is corruption in any government, one must have the courage and decorum to accuse the person who is in authority on national television. To be seen holding a meeting and divulging information to a foreign delegation is unseemly. "The senator has no right whatsoever to use national airwaves to attack the elected government of this country," he said. Saraki said the attacks on the leadership of the ruling All Progressive Congress (APC) could cause a lot of damage and could be ruinous to the country's foreign direct investment inflows. "Everyone with the remotest acquaintance with Nigeria must be concerned about the negative effect of such attacks on the country's image and the foreign investment interest in our economy," he said. He added: "I have no doubt that Nigerians will not allow the wrongdoers or anti-democratic forces in any part of our society to succeed in their nefarious schemes and destroy our democracy." Saraki said Nigerians would not allow the APC to get away with the alleged corruption. "Nigeria was once the envy of the world because of the respect and integrity of our people. We were seen as a model, a beacon of hope for African nations. The image of Nigeria has been altered. "The leadership of the country has been traduced and we are now in a situation where our reputation and integrity as a nation are being called into question. "
